BUFFALO'S BIG SHOW

PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION A GORGEOUS DISPLAY.

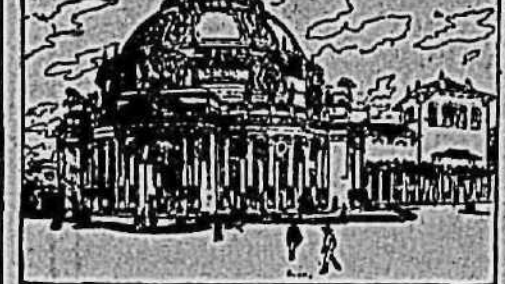

Plenty of Contrast and Color, Unlike the Chicago Fair—A Correspondent Says It's Well Worth Crossing the Continent to See.

Buffalo correspondence:

The Pan-American exposition in many respects ought to be the most successful international exposition ever held in America. The Centennial at Philadelphia and the Columbian World's Fair at Chicago are the only exhibitions that can fairly be compared with the Pan-American at Buffalo. Each of those was held in a slough of bad times. The nation was sick at heart. Most of the people were too poor for entertainments. Buffalo gets the benefit of the most marvelous rush of prosperity the country has ever known. She has the advantage, too, of eight years of scientific progress over Chicago.

and of twenty-five years over Philadelphia—a quarter of a century as full of miracles as half a dozen centuries in slower times. And then she has Niagara Falls—a thing no other city could have matched eight years ago, or twenty-five, or at any other time.

It is a happy thought of Buffalo to invite the world to come and see the falls while she has them. They will not last very long. Even if they were left to themselves they would probably wear away and disappear within the next ten or fifteen thousand years, but industrial enterprise is not likely to let us keep them even as long as that. Within the next half century the Niagara river may be all running through a double row of electric power tunnels, leaving nothing but a dry cliff where now the cataract surges. So all should hasten to Buffalo.

ILLINOIS INCIDENTS.

SOBER OR STARTLING, FAITHFULLY RECORDED.

Deatruive Fire at Morris—Thirty-three Buildings Burned at Gridley—Dog Attempts to Save a Boy's Life—Farmer with Broken Neck Survives.

Fire started by an explosion of dust in the elevator owned by Hull & Nelson, in Morris, destroyed that building and endangered the entire town. A number of cars of corn on a near-by switch caught from the building, but all were saved except one. Shells containing thousands of bushels of corn became ignited and burned. On these there was no insurance, although $5,500 was held on the elevator and contents by Hull & Nelson. Their loss will reach $15,000. The Carson House barn and William Reardon's barns were destroyed, together with a large number of sheds. The $20,000 depot which the Rock Island Railway Company has just completed was damaged to the extent of $2,000. A heavy wind, blowing from the north, carried a block west and the three-and-one-half story refrigerator building was soon destroyed, together with a nearby warehouse. The refrigerator building was owned by Baum & Woodbury, and their loss is $10,000, with no insurance. The loss on the warehouse will amount to $2,000, with no insurance.

Heavy Loss at Gridley.
Two entire business blocks, thirty-three buildings facing Center street, were burned at Gridley, occasioning a loss conservatively estimated at $80,000. Mrs. H. Cohn, wife of a clothing merchant, started to burn a pile of rubbish at 1:30 the other afternoon. She was called into the store. In a few minutes the flames had spread to the butcher-shop owned by William Settle, a brick south wind carried it across Center street to the new Commercial Hotel and from there it jumped to the new Gridley State Bank. By this time it was seen that the whole town was in danger, and a call for aid was sent to Peoria, which responded with a steamer and a hose cart. Before their arrival the fire had destroyed two blocks of buildings and had practically burned itself out. There were no injuries. In all about thirty buildings were burned. The work of rebuilding the town will be commenced immediately.

Dog Tries to Save Boy's Life.
A shepherd dog belonging to Arthur Sattley made a pitiful attempt to save the life of young Walter Watts Gard, who was drowned in a brick yard pond at Springfield. Only the closing scene of the tragedy was witnessed. Just as a companion of Gard's reached the pond the lad sank for the last time. A moment later the dog rose to the surface and swam to the bank in an exhausted condition. When the body was recovered prints of the dog's teeth upon the arms showed the efforts the brute had made to save his friend. Gard was 14 years old and a newspaper carrier.

Lives with a Broken Neck.
The remarkable case of Fred Roloff, a farmer near Burlington, living with a broken neck is attracting the attention of physicians and the public. On March 20 he fell from a load of wood, breaking his neck at the fifth spinal bone. His limbs are completely paralyzed. He can, however, move his head and shoulders, and can speak, breathe and swallow food. The doctor who has charge of the case says death would have ensued had the break occurred one inch higher, as the phrenic nerve, at present uninjured, would have been severed then.

MRS. MCKINLEY IS ILL

PRESIDENT'S WIFE WORN OUT BY LONG JOURNEY.

Physician Says Rest Is All that Is Needed—Hurry Trip to San Francisco to Consult Specialists—Cabinet Ministers Carry Out Program.

President McKinley's tour of the West was suddenly interfered with by the serious illness of Mrs. McKinley. A special train bearing President and Mrs. McKinley, Miss Barber, Dr. Rixey, Secretary Cortelyou and Henry T. Scott and Mrs. Scott arrived in San Francisco at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon from Del Monte. Mrs. McKinley was taken there by the President in advance of the regular program that she might obtain complete rest. Upon arrival the President and party were driven to the residence of Henry T. Scott.

Mrs. McKinley has not been well since the long journey began and the trip has fatigued her very much. Her condition became such that both the President and Dr. Rixey considered it wise to take her to San Francisco, where she could have complete rest for a few days at Mr. Scott's residence and where Dr. Hirschfelder, Mr. Scott's physician, could be consulted if necessary. The cabinet and other members of the party carried out the program as arranged, arriving in San Francisco on Tuesday.

The illness of Mrs. McKinley cast a shadow on the other members of the party who remained at Del Monte, and there was talk at first of abandoning the entire schedule between there and San Francisco, but Mrs. McKinley especially requested that the plans of the party should not be disarranged by her departure.

Felon Appears on Her Finger.

tor which prevented her from sleeping. Dr. Rixey lanced the felon twice and gave her some relief in that way. Mrs. McKinley bore it all very bravely and urged continually that the program at the cities and towns en route should not be modified in any particular on her account.

It was hoped that the rest at Del Monte would do her good, but she slept little at night and in the morning she reluctantly agreed to go to San Francisco at once. The President and Mrs. McKinley left at 12:30 o'clock for San Francisco on a special train, consisting of a locomotive and the combination baggage and smoker Atlantic and the private car Olympia. The entire equipment was made up from the presidential special train. The run was made in three and one-half hours.

Dr. Rixey said Mrs. McKinley's condition was not alarming. She is worn out by her long journey and it was considered wise to take her to San Francisco, where she could have proper nursing and where specialists could be consulted. But, a correspondent says, while the physician in attendance talks thus reassuringly, it is believed that her condition is much more serious than he is willing to admit.

WANT DOLE REMOVED.

Hawaiian Legislature Demands that McKinley Oust the Governor.

The removal of Gov. Dole has been demanded of President McKinley by a large majority in each house of the Hawaiian territorial legislature. The lawmakers accuse the governor of obstructing legislation and of being responsible for the adjournment of the legislature without passing a single one of the important measures to which the home-ruled were pledged, except the county government act, which the governor killed by a rest-pocket veto. Gov. Dole, in turn, denounces the legislators, making general charges of bribery and explaining

A RIVER BOAT SINKS.

PADUCAH GOES DOWN IN THE MISSISSIPPI.

Steamer Strikes a Snag During the Night Near Grand Tower, Ill.—Reports say that Between Twenty and Thirty Persons Are Drowned.

The steamer City of Paducah sank early Monday morning in the Mississippi River near Grand Tower, Ill. Early reports stated that between twenty and thirty of the passengers and crew were drowned. The boat struck a snag while backing out from Brunkhorst landing. After striking the snag the pilot attempted to turn the City of Paducah's stern, and while making the turn the boat sank, going down in less than two minutes.

The boat left St. Louis Sunday morning, and at nearly every landing along the river took on freight, most of which was corn. The steamer carried a small passenger list and a light cargo. During the night she was backing out from Brunkhorst landing, which is about ten miles above Grand Tower, when she is supposed to have struck a dangerous sandbar which is located at that point. The passengers and most of the crew were asleep at the time. When the fact became known that the boat was in trouble a panic took possession of the people on board. Several jumped overboard and swam ashore. The boat sank in twenty-five feet of water.

The steamer City of Clifton, of the same line, passed up shortly after the accident and took on board the crew and passengers who had escaped.

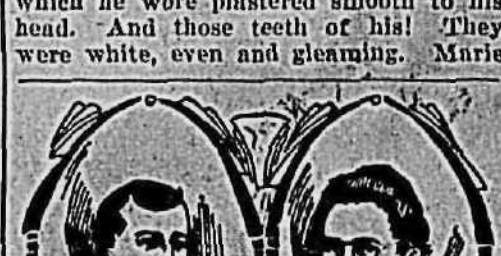

A dispatch from St. Louis says that it was about 1 o'clock Monday morning when the accident occurred, and that the boat seemed to suddenly give way, all the center from the bow chain breaking and going down in less than two minutes. The break was directly under the berth occupied by Rev. Mr. Block, a Jewish rabbi, his wife and daughter. The daughter was aroused from sleep by the jar and asked her mother if their berth had broken down. No sooner had the words passed her lips than the water rushed into their apartments and covered them to their chins. By heroic efforts they were able to get ashore.

The City of Paducah was a 600-ton vessel, nine years old, and cost $30,000. Captain Kirkpatrick, one of the oldest river men of St. Louis, who had been with the vessel since it was put into commission, was in charge. It was fully insured. This is the third time the City of Paducah has sunk, but the first time loss of life has occurred. Captain Kirkpatrick stated that the boat would be a total loss.

A FAMOUS MURDER.

It Is Recalled by the Trial of Prof. Charles H. Eastman.

The trial of Prof. Charles H. Eastman, Harvard College instructor, charged with the murder of his brother-in-law Richard Grogan, awakens memories of one of the most celebrated tragedies in the history of this country—the murder of Dr. Geo. Parkman by Dr. John A. Webster, professor of chemistry at Harvard and lecturer of chemistry in the Boston Medical College.

Dr. Parkman was a well-to-do, old and aristocratic man. Just a week after the murder, when the detectives dug a hole through a stone wall under the building, into a vault which had no opening save from Webster's laboratory. There in found the hip bones and two leg bones of a human body. Webster was at once arrested.

He took strychnine at the police station, but not enough to kill him. Further search of his laboratory, which occupied two rooms, one above the other, on the basement and first floors of the medical college, resulted in the finding of Parkman's chest bone and clavicles buried among tin in a chest, covered by mineral specimens, and of his false teeth, part of his skull and a shirt button, in the ashes of a furnace.

Petition Shows Liabilities to Be $747,008 and Assets Nil.

Charles Foster of Fostoria, Ohio, filed a petition in voluntary bankruptcy in the United States District Court in Toledo.

Mr. Foster has absolutely no assets and the schedule of debts is: Secured claims, $238,574.20; unsecured claims, $107,451.58; notes and bills which ought to be paid by other parties thereto, $142,008.42; accommodation paper, $170,374.14; grand total, $747,008.34.

Mr. Foster is perhaps one of the best known politicians in the United States. He has resided for years in Fostoria and the town was named in his honor. He has embarked quite extensively in business and has lost much money in glass manufacturing ventures. Mr. Foster was elected to Congress in 1888 from the Tenth District. He served until 1878, and owing to the ferryman of the district was beaten in a close contest, reducing the Democratic majority from 3,400 to something less than 1,200. Gen. Finley being elected. In 1870 he was elected Governor of Ohio and served in the gubernatorial capacity until 1880.

Mr. Foster was appointed Secretary of the Treasury by President Harrison to fill the vacancy caused by the death of William Windom. He held the treasury portfolio to the end of Harrison's administration.

Few-Line Interviews.
Dennis T. Flynn, Delegate from Oklahoma to Congress—I believe that the next Congress will give statehood to Oklahoma. I feel confident of it. Commercially, intellectually, as regards population and in every other requirement, she is in a position to demand recognition. Oklahoma stands very high at Washington and throughout the East, and her credit is rising constantly.

R. E. L. Mehan of Monterey, Mex.—Everything is booming in Mexico. The great industrial revolution, Mexico is passing through in all parts with the introduction of Northern and Eastern capital and American methods, is making it an excellent place for young men with brains and energy to go and stay. There is a real demand for such men in that country now, and it is a pleasant place to live.

Judge Allen Page of Nebraska—I regard the ease with which divorce can be obtained as one of the greatest evils of our American life. Men and women of the stage and men and women in high social positions set the example, which others are only too ready to follow. The trouble is that the American people are drifting away from right principles of living. They live artificially instead of naturally, and until we leave our artificial existence many things are bound to be wrong.

George B. Lane of Olympia, Wash.—formerly of Nebraska—I have been in the Senate about 15 years. I have established a record as a long-winded talker during his senatorial term at Washington. Just to keep history right I want to say that Senator Allen established a record at Kearney in 1882, when he talked for five hours before a Grand Jury of the Republic encampment to hold open a session until an Omaha delegation of old soldiers in favor of Mr. Clark, senator of Nebraska, could be collected. I heard Mr. Allen then and must say that he impressed me with the idea that he was possessed of an inexhaustible source of matter. He was entertaining, too, and kept the delegation in good humor throughout the entire time.

M. E. Foster of Houston, Texas—Houston has already arranged to make practical use of the Beaumont oil. Twelve Houston factories will burn the oil, and their furnaces are now being changed to use the new fuel. At a meeting of the commercial chamber the other day the matter came up and a resolution was taken. Twelve factories, as I stated, have already availed themselves of the cheaper fuel and others will follow. Pipe lines will be laid eventually, but for the present the oil will be hauled to Houston.

MINISTER UNDER FIRE.

Church Society Says He Took A Large Sum—Dwight, Ill., Pastor Must Account for $150,000.

Rev. S. A. Harris, for several years until recently pastor of the Congregational church at Millburn, Ill., has been suspended from the ministry for six months pending an investigation of charges which are made by his former parishioners, who declare they are out over $100,000 which they had intrusted to the minister for speculations that are said to have turned out unfortunately.

Mr. Harris was at one time a lawyer in Chicago and a member of the Board of Trade.

Mr. Harris and his friends assert that no blame can be attached to him; that the funds were put into his hands that he might do the best he could to increase them and that the going wrong of the various enterprises in which the money was sunk was no fault of his.

The story came out yesterday when Mr. Harris applied to his pastorate, from which he was forced out a short time ago, for a recommendation to a congregation at Dwight, Ill. Not only was the recommendation refused, but his one-time flock indignantly told of the loss of their savings and demanded restitution.

No charges of dishonesty in the matter have been brought against the expounder of the gospel, but there are many criticisms of his course in accepting money for what was said to be a purely speculative scheme.

Millburn was Mr. Harris' first charge. Shortly after going there he began to unfold his plans to his friends, and because of his position as head of the church the country folk took up with the plan eagerly.

His scheme never was very clearly understood by even the heaviest investors. It was some sort of a loan association paying from 9 to 10 per cent on the money. At first a few of the smaller investors received a 9 per cent return on their money and a few got their principal back.

Gradually, however, it is said that the investors not only did not get the interest, but when they asked for their original investment it could not be secured. The association which Mr. Harris promoted was known as the Harris Provident Saving Fund Company and to some of his subscribers he gave certificates of deposits into this company.

To others, as security for their money, Mr. Harris gave bonds on the town of Gilman, promissory notes, and to others he gave nothing but his word. It is said in this way in the several years he obtained $100,000 and some estimate the amount at $150,000. Last year Mr. Harris himself stated that he had collected, when matured, about $250,000. At any rate, according to one man who was asked to invest and who was according shown the books, four years ago, there was $70,000 entered therein. The amounts collected range from 50 cents to $400 and included in many cases the savings of families for years.

Mr. Harris in securing these advances, is said to have stated that not only would the depositors get annual interest, but they could get the return of their principal at any time they desire, but that if left with him for eight and one-half years the principal would be double.

Two young women school teachers, sisters, were taken with the scheme and invested their all. They are said to have secured nothing back. One man is said to have handed over from $5,500 to $4,000.

Other persons who invested in the loan association were: George Dodge, D. J. Minto, W. J. White, John Bonner, James Bonner, Dr. Taylor, Robert Strang, Alfred Spafford, Hattie Richards, the Misses McCredie and Mr. Kerr. John McCredie, one of the first investors, is said to have received 9 per cent on his $4,000 and also secured the return of his principal.

As time passed along the populace grew suspicious and began clamoring for the return of the money. The church took the matter up and endeavored to have it known that its pastor's scheme was not sanctioned by the people as an organization. No satisfaction was secured and Mr. Harris was suspended for a period of six months. The time expired but he never returned to renew his work.

CHURCHES ARE PREFERRED.

April 22 a meeting of citizens and church people was held in the village and Rev. Mr. Harris was summoned from Dwight, Ill., to answer charges. His explanations were of little satisfaction and no return of money was offered at that time. The Chicago Chronicle, May 10, 1901.

A Very Remarkable Remedy.

"It is with a good deal of pleasure and satisfaction that I recommend Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy," says Druggist A. W. Sawtelle, of Hartford, Conn. "A lady customer, seeing the remedy exposed for sale on my show case, said to me: 'I really believe that medicine saved my life the past summer while at the shore, and she became so enthusiastic over its merits I at once made up my mind to recommend it in the future. Recently a gentleman came into my store so overcome with colic pains that he sank at once to the floor. I gave him a dose of this remedy which helped him.' I repeated the dose and in fifteen minutes he left my store smilingly informing me that he felt as well as ever." Sold by W. H. Emmons, Antioch; Thomson's Pharmacy, Graylake.

Mr. W. J. Baxter, of North Brook, N. C. says he suffered with piles for fifteen years. He tried many remedies with no results until he used DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve and that quickly cured him. W. T. Hill.

Now We Have Whist Face.

Now we have "the whist face" to add to the list. It is showing itself among the women, and comes from the whist club habit, which is rapidly growing, showing its strength not only at night, but in the afternoons, and even in the mornings, associated with tea and wafers, chocolate and bonbons. One expression of the whist face, though it is said, and is told with an effort, is age. The women may shudder at the thought, but the fact remains. Intense thought and daily racking the memory to remember what cards have been played can not but deepen the face lines and hasten what heretofore the women have left for time to accomplish without their permission. In the whist face you will see the far-away look, accompanied by arched lines on the forehead, suddenly changing to an expression of inward contemplation, associated with a tightening of the lips. These expressions come from an acrobatic mind under training that consists in leaping from the first lead, jump by jump, over each successive play. Nature can recover from this sort of thing when occasionally indulged in, but when it becomes a habit, practiced almost daily, and sometimes for two or more sessions a day, the expression becomes fixed, and follows the wearer, no matter what her thought or occupation may be at the time.—Chicago Journal.

A Captured Whale.

Some ten or twelve years ago a whale floundered into Oyster bay, just north of the Columbia river mouth, and in the state of Washington. The bay is shallow and there is a sand bar at the entrance to it; but the whale must have hidden in on a big wave. At any rate, the next morning perhaps the maddest whale in the world was charging up and down the bay, running its nose into the sand furiously spouting water and mud like a geyser and evidently determined to get back to the Pacific ocean at any cost. For weeks the gigantic creature raged up and down the bay like a big fish in a small tub of water. The railroads ran excursions to the scene, and the captive animal drew a larger crowd than a whole circus. At last a great storm came, and when it departed the whale went with it. So the railroads declared an extra dividend, and the people about the bay went back to work or play, as suited their tastes or necessities.

Sowed Up for the Winter.

This is a true story, and it was told to the reporter by a prominent worker in one of the east side settlements. The other day a woman living in Rivington street brought her little boy to the settlement house and expressed a desire to have him enter the kindergarten. The child had a bright face, but it was woefully dirty, and one of the settlement rules is that all pupils must present at least a clean exterior. So the teacher looked at the little boy and said: "Why, certainly he can come to the kindergarten, but we want all the children to be clean. Give him a good bath tonight and send him to us in the morning." "Bath," gasped the mother. "How can I bathe him? I've sewed him up for the winter."—New York Mail and Express.

Signals to the Planet.

Take a flag about the size of Europe and mount it upon a staff the length of the circumference of the earth. Then generate sufficient electric fluid to illuminate the material, which should be of a conductive character. Having done this, apply the fluid to the material with the assistance of all the electric waves in the solar system. Next change the laws of nature in so much as they prevent the operation of waving so gigantic a flag as the signal. Select a day when the conditions are favorable, and put the apparatus in operation. Then, if the Martians are on the alert, they may possibly observe the signal and reply to it, say, in a couple of centuries. If you do not obtain a manifestation conclude that the inhabitants of Mars are looking another way.—From London Punch.

Etiquette of the Sick Room.

In the sick room try to keep the conversation as much as possible on other subjects besides the illness of the patient. Avoid speaking of the illness of anyone. What you say to the sick one should be something cheerful, and how much better and brighter the patient seems. Never tell anyone that they look "so ill," no matter what you think, for such remarks have a depressing effect on the patient and surely does nobody any good. A bright, cheerful, jovial, happy, hopeful person entering a sick room is like the rays of the morning sun shining on a drooping plant. The effect is electrical and the patient is at least temporarily lifted a step forward to a quick recovery.

No Tobacco Raised in Egypt.

Tobacco raising has been prohibited by law in Egypt since 1890. In fact, there is nothing Egyptian about "Egyptian cigarettes" except that they are made in Egypt. The tobacco all comes from Turkey, the paper from Austria, Germany or Italy, and most of the labor employed is Greek.

City Proud of Crematory.

There was recently opened at Hull, England, a municipal crematory. It is the first institution of its kind to be built and operated by a municipal undertaking. The mayor of Hull, in opening the new crematory, spoke of it as an institution of which the city had good reason to be proud.

Weakly Have Few Children.

An inquisitive reporter last week took a census of a mile of Fifth avenue, New York, embracing the homes of many very rich men, and found just fifteen children under the age of 12. There was an average of one child to three houses. Then the reporter transferred his attention to the east side tenement district, where he found in one flat house sixty-three children, or more than four times the number found in the whole Fifth avenue mile.

If people only knew what we know about Kodol Dyspepsia Cure, it would be used in nearly every household, as there are few people who do not suffer from a feeling of fullness after eating, belching, flatulence, sour stomach or water brash, caused by indigestion or dyspepsia. A preparation such as Kodol Dyspepsia Cure, which, with no aid from the stomach, will digest your food, certainly can't help but do you good. Wm. T. Hill.

Papal Palace at Avignon.

The process of restoration of the famous Palace of the Popes at Avignon is actively proceeding. The battle-ment tower of the chief wing is almost entirely repaired, and now exhibits the imposing frontage which characterized it in the fourteenth century. At present the old citadel of the popes is occupied by a regiment of infantry, but the latter are about to evacuate the building, which will then be probably utilized by the municipality of Avignon as a museum.

FROM A SMALL START.

Majestic Growth of the Krupp Plant at Essen, Germany.

With the profits derived from his forge, Frederick Krupp was enabled, in 1818, to build a small plant, consisting of eight melting furnaces, with one crucible apiece, on the spot where the great world-famed establishment now stands. Although the good quality of his product was recognized, he had not attained complete success at the time of his death in 1826. The cast steel works were carried on by his widow and his eldest son, Alfred. The 14-year-old boy, who was obliged to leave school, labored untiringly at the crucibles, assisted by two workmen. While engaged in this hard toil, often lasting through the night, he lived on potatoes, coffee and bread and butter, without any meat, says the Engineering Magazine. He was master and apprentice, he was founder and smith, packer and errand boy, book-keeper and traveling man. On Sundays he wrote up the books and made out the accounts. The establishment to-day consists of the cast steel works at Essen, the Krupp steel works, formerly F. Asthewer & Co., in Annen, Westphalia, where steel castings of all kinds are the principal product; the Gruson works, at Backau, near Magdeburg, where hardened cast armor, armored turrets, crushing machines and so on are made; four blast furnace plants, at Rheinhausen, Duisburg, Neuwerk and Engers; four coal mines, namely, the Hanover mines, shafts No. 1 and 2; the Salzer and Neuaek mine, and the Hannibal mine; part interests in other coal mines; a great number of iron mines in Germany and in Spain, a proving ground at Meppen, 16.8 kilometers (10.5 miles) in length, with provision for extending the firing range to 24 kilometers (15 miles); three ocean steamers; stone quarries; clay and sand pits, etc. Besides all this, the firm of Frederick Krupp operates by contract the Germania Ship and Engine Building company of Berlin and Kiel.

The History of Etiquette.

Etiquette is a form of fashion more important than style in dress, for the reason that the varying codes of manners have influenced morals—something changing the cut of a coat cannot be said to have done. When etiquette demanded that a gentleman accept a challenge or acknowledge himself a coward in the minds of his fellow citizens it encroached sharply upon ethics; now that it has gone out of fashion to kill, gentlemen find small difficulty in keeping the sixth commandment. The less formal etiquette becomes the less wanton taking of life there is among those who consider good breeding of consequence. As the civilized races now stand, either man or woman can be refined regardless of shape of hat he or she wears. This was true in any century, but 200 years ago, and back of that period, a gentleman and lady could, according to approved etiquette, gobble food with their hands from a common dish set in the center of the dining table and filled with the entire fashionable bill of fare prepared for the occasion. Gratefully we now acknowledge such proceedings to be "bad form," and in so doing pronounce ourselves two centuries removed from the table manners of swine, and one point away from that brute, no matter how similar to him our turn of mind may remain in some other respects.—National Magazine.

Vienna's Club of the Divorced.

Vienna has a new society which should rouse some American cities to noble emulation. No woman not divorced is eligible to membership, but there is nothing frivolous about the organization. It is to be called the Humane Club, and its badge is a silver ring, engraved with that word, and worn on the wedding ring finger. The appropriateness of the name seems a little occult; but, presumably, a divorced woman has more troubles of her own, in Austria, than here and needs moral support. The idea of a band of divorced women meeting weekly "for mutual entertainment and support" will probably strike the average American citizen as distinctly humorous; but it is a serious matter in Vienna, and the club proposes building for itself a permanent home.—New York Sun.

Spinsters in Clover.

In Denmark the spinster's state has been robbed of much of its horror. In fact, there's a premium on spinsterhood. A celibacy insurance company has been founded, and between an insurance policy and a husband a Danish maiden's heart is rent with indecision. Matrimony is interesting, but problematic. Insurance in a good company is a safe proposition. How shall a wise woman choose? If the holder of a policy in the celibacy is still unmarried at 40 she is considered immune, and gets a life annuity. If she marries before 40 she forfeits her policy and premiums. In Sweden and Norway there are several old maids' homes, and at least one of them is a most attractive institution. A very wealthy man, dying more than 200 years ago, left most of his fortune to the old maids among his descendants. A superb home was built and furnished and managed by salaried trustees. Any old maid who can prove blood relationship to the founder of the institution is entitled to a place in the home. She has a private suite of rooms, a private servant, private meals, and is subject to no rules save such as ordinary good behavior demands.—New York Sun.

AMERICA'S DEADLIEST SPOT.

Appropriate Name of Death Gulch in Yellowstone Park.

Death Gulch is the name given by those living near it to a ravine in the northeastern corner of the Yellowstone National park, in Wyoming. Grew some as is the name, it is exceedingly appropriate. It is a V-shaped trench cut in the mountain side, and begins about 250 feet above Cache creek. Apparently it forms a natural shelter for the beasts of the forest, as food, water and shelter are there, but entrance to the gulch means death to any animal for the poisonous vapors that rise out of the ravine are more deadly than the bullets of the hunters. Various expeditions under the direction of the United States Geological Survey have reported as to the characteristics of Death Gulch, the last being by Harvey W. Weed. He said that he had tested the hollows in the gulch for carbonic acid gas without proving its presence. The atmosphere in the gulch, however, was oppressive. There was a strong smell of sulphur, and he suffered from a choking sensation, although a strong wind prevailed at the time. At the bottom of the gulch were the carcasses of many animals, some of which had met death but a short time before. These carcasses were of bear, elk, hares, squirrels, etc. Charles E. George and Mr. Everett of Boston visited the gulch and made an extended examination. They declare the gulch is a death trap, which, while different in many ways from the famous Death Valley of Java, is as certain in its effect. At one end the gulch is comparatively open and the wind sweeps through, but at the other, where it forms a ravine, the gases accumulate and asphyxiate all animals that come within the walls of rock. When Mr. George and Mr. Everett entered the gulch the gaseous fumes were so oppressive that they had difficulty in breathing, yet they entered at the end where the gulch is practically open. They lit a wax taper and found that when placed more than forty inches from the ground it was extinguished. This proved the existence of carbon dioxide gas. The bed of the gulch and ravine was littered with the bones and skins of animals long since dead. They found twenty-three carcasses of bears, one big cinnamon having his nose between his paws, just as if he had fallen asleep.—San Francisco Call.

IMPROVE THE HUMAN RACE.

Means That Are Being Employed for Man's Physical Development.

Man is an animal and Darwin has shown that not only is he closely akin to other animals, but that the laws which control the development of the lower animals also control the development of man. He has also shown that cross breeds of animals are larger and stronger than either parent. When we examine into the origin of the English people we find the ancient Britons fighting and mingling with the Romans, Danes, Saxons and Normans. For more than 1,000 years these various breeds of men have been molded into that great mass that we know as Englishmen. Turning to the United States, we find the foundations of a new nation laid by the sturdiest and most enterprising of these same Englishmen. They landed on the then distant shore, conquered the wilderness, organized a new government closely akin to the old and invited the people of the old world to join them. The Slave, the Germans and the Latins mingle together and in a few years become neo-Anglo-Saxons, or what may be termed Anglo-Americans. The evolution going on in the United States is also going on in Canada, in South Africa, in Australia, in New Zealand, and in other smaller places scattered around the world. There is thus being formed on a gigantic scale a new race of men built on the strongest lines in which it is possible to construct human beings. The different sections of this new race have a common language and literature, the same laws and customs and the trend of industrial civilization gives them identical political interests.—Baltimore Sun.

THE CHINESE SOIREE.

How to Drink Tea in the Land of the Pagoda.

When you call on a Chinaman who is able to have a servant, the first thing that the servant does is to bring in two cups of tea. He puts one in front of the master and one in front of the visitor. Then the master indicates that you shall drink from the cup before you. If you want to incur his everlasting enmity go ahead and drink. He merely asks you to drink it for politeness' sake. He does not want you to do it and expects you to refuse for politeness' sake. Letting the tea stand in front of you, you proceed with your interview, and you are at liberty to continue it, and you may feel that you are welcome until the host picks up his cup and takes a sip. That is the polite way; he has no intention of taking one sip of your tea and departing. The right to drink the first sip of tea, however, goes with rank. If the visitor outranks the host, no matter how outwitted the host may wish to be rid of him—he must sit until the visitor chooses to take a sip of his tea.—New York Sun.

The Ones We Like Best.

We must have a weak spot or two, says Oliver Wendell Holmes, in a character before we can love it much. People that do not laugh or cry or take more of anything than is good for them, or use anything but dictionary words, are admirable subjects for biographers. But we don't always care most for those flat pattern flowers that press best in the paragonium.

The Golf Girl

Is the type of the modern woman at her healthiest and best. She walks with an easy grace, she is a picture of perfect womanhood in the prime of life. But generally the golf club is laid aside with marriage. A physical languor oppresses the once athletic girl. Exercise makes her back ache. She grows easily tired. She accepts this condition as a natural thing, but it is unnatural. Marriage should add to woman's happiness, rather than subtract from it. If women would only take the general health of the local health of the womanly organs, they would appreciate the fact that there is no need to suffer from weakness and backache. The use of Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes weak women strong, sick women well. It regulates the periods, heals inflammation and ulceration, cures female weakness, and puts the body in a condition of sound health.

Mrs. H. A. Albrook, of Austin, Texas, writes: "After five months of great suffering with female weakness I write for the benefit of other sufferers from the same affliction. I doctored with our family physician without any good results, so my husband urged me to try Dr. Pierce's medicine, which I did, with wonderful results. I am completely cured. I took four bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, four of his Golden Medical Discovery, and two vials of his 'Pleasant Pellets.' Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation and its consequences."

"But this is different from the man who governs and rules the mill. He controls the power, and the tremendous machinery that shapes the unwilling metal to his desire; nothing is too hard or too easy for him; the round, thick, black, iron man in front of his gears and mighty nature submissively obeys his will, his pulses swell and thrill with the consciousness of power, and he bears himself erect with the dignity of masterhood. What does not the world of to-day owe to the men who make the iron? They are the true kings of civilization. Practically, all that is fashioned, all that is done, all that is thought for the world's progress to-day is rooted in their work. The first iron worker was a god, and a god among gods, mind you. What would you, thinking, have amounted to if he had not had Vulcan to forge his thunderbolts for him?"

"Why, you surprise me, Uncle David. I had no idea you felt that way. How does it come that you never went into iron-working?"

"I hardly know myself. Sometimes it seems to me that in some dimly remembered, remote time, as if in a half-forgotten former life, I wrought iron. It is a curious fancy that comes to me, not in dreams, as you might suppose, but when I am all alone, wide awake, sitting still, letting my mind do its own thinking and not trying to control it at all. And it has come to me, too, when visiting an iron mill and seeing new and strange machinery, which I would at once comprehend the uses of, without explanation, and recognize as an improvement upon something I would vaguely remember as employed for a like purpose in some shadowy, by-gone time, far back of the knowledge of Dary Henderson. It is strange that I have contented me on a farm. And yet, on second thoughts, I don't. There are few men, I think, who would not find something else than what they are and fill some other place than that into which fate has thrust and keeps them. I guess, the much I've done in building has kept me content. Building is next to iron-making. The happiest days of my life, I believe, were those in which I was building that stone court house, the better, I liked the job. Gosh, lad, I'd like to build with mountains! But, eh, what an old dreamer I'm getting to be! Come! Let's talk of something else. What are you going to do?"

"I'm not very clear about anything beyond marrying Hetty and finding out if it's true that skunk, Sim Mulvill, had a warrant for me, and if so, what for." "Oh! So that is worrying you? Well, some think he had, but more don't believe it, and nobody pretends to say what it was for. Something was said, on Training Day, about thieving, but it is understood, of course, that that was only to start the fight. The was Sim and Rufus came to their just and righteous end, and there was some color to the rumor that there was a warrant for you and Sim had it. Some of those cursed Mulvills have aped, by sheer guesswork, to the fact at he and Rufus were drowned when chasing you."

"And Hetty?" "No. The curious thing is that her elopement is not known to a soul in Washington County except her mother and yours, Mary Elder and me."

"And Danny?" "Well, I suppose that imp may have some idea of it, but it's hardly likely, or he would have blabbed it just for mischief."

John smiled, thinking he knew Danny better, but did not feel called upon to defend him.

"But, to return to what I was saying, some of the Mulvills do have the idea I mentioned, and do sort of blame you. And it is just possible they may try to make things unpleasant for you on your return, just at first."

"Any Mulvill who dares trouble with me shall have all he wants of it."

"I have no doubt, and it is just to avert anything of the sort that I want matters a little my way just now. It is only by giving no opportunities for the breaking out of that foolish old grudge, we can hope to ever get it extinguished. It is a disgrace to us as civilized men and Christians that it should exist, and just see how it stands in the way of your own happiness."

home that evening. Nevertheless, he said to himself:

"Human nature is weak, and the temptation of love is strong. I had better stroll over there after supper and keep an eye on John for awhile."

That was, perhaps, all well enough; but why should Uncle David—ordinarily so careless about his personal appearance—have taken so much trouble in combing and brushing his hair and beard, changing his coat for a better one and putting on a smart necktie? He would hardly have done so much by way of preparation for attending a meeting of the elders or of the board of supervisors.

John and his mother were still sitting in the door, when he put in an appearance before them, and at the farther end of the porch, in front of the new extension of the house, Miss Mary Elder occupied a rocking chair, enjoying her evening rest after a busy day of work on Mrs. Cameron's summer wardrobe. Seeing that the widow and her son were in earnest converse, the girl went up on the porch and seated herself near the splinter, with the most casual, unpretentious and unconcerned manner he could assume, quite unconscious that behind him John was lifting his eyebrows with a look of surprised inquiry, to which Mrs. Cameron replied by a nod and knowing smile.

In the commencement of their conversation, both Uncle David and Mary spoke with ordinary loudness, but gradually, when weather and health and the look of the wheel had been disposed of, their voices dropped so as to be audible only to each other.

"You are working too hard, Miss Mary," David said to her. "If you keep on, the confinement and bending over your needle so steadily will affect your health and good looks."

"You are very good to interest yourself in me, sir," she replied hesitatingly, with an unpleasant sense of constraint and awkwardness in encountering the novel experience of even an only implied compliment.

"Oh, no. If we lone strays from the domestic folds do not take an interest in each other's welfare, we are likely to be overlooked and forgotten altogether."

He spoke jocosely, but with a shade of earnestness in his tone that Mary could not but be aware of.

"I'm sure it would not be easy to overlook you," she responded, smilingly.

"Perhaps 'overlooked' is not just the word I should have used. I remember finding once, in the edge of the creek, a bottle containing a fish. The foolish creature seemed to have gone in there when small, and been unable to find its way out until it grew too large to do so. No doubt all the fishes that went by its transparent prison saw it, and possibly wondered why it staid there instead of joining in the general swim, assuming the responsibilities and discharging the social and domestic duties recognized in fish communities. But the environment established for it by its own youthful folly had been too strong for it, until I came along, broke the bottle and restored it to its proper place among the multitude of its kind in the common pursuit of happiness and probable realization of pin-hooks."

"Dear me!" said Mary, looking puzzled. "How very kind of you!"

"Occasionally," he went on, "I fancy myself like that bottled fish. I had chosen, or, at least, had accepted an environment that became a prison. In other words, I find myself a confirmed old bachelor."

"Oh!" exclaimed Mary, smiling approval of the course he was manifestly heading. "A bachelor, yes; but not so very old."

"Mr. well, old enough to know better; old enough to realize that no phase of human existence is more selfish, useless and devoid of real happiness than that in which I have so long elected to live. Now, in all frankness, Mary, what good are you and I to the world, as we are? I may even ask: What good are we to ourselves, since, if we are no good to others, we cannot be to ourselves? Thanks to our industrious, frugal habits, the longer we live and go on as we are, the more property we will have accumulated by the time we are called upon to leave it. And we will leave behind all that we have lived for—leave it to those who, in a few years will have forgotten us. Our names will have been written in water."

"I'm sure I have heard of your doing many a kind action to the poor and unfortunate, Mr. Henderson."

"The proof that I have not done enough is that I still possess far more than I will ever have any personal need for."

"I confess I never thought of it in that way. I have always tried to do what I felt my duty called me to, in the way of sending the gospel to the heathen and such like; but a woman isn't expected to do much, you know, and I've saved up a pretty snug sum, more, as you say, than I will ever have any personal need for."

"I don't doubt it; and yet here you are working away as hard as ever to get more, and drifting around from place to place without a home you can call your own."

"And don't you think I feel that? Oh, many a time, even where people have been as kind to me as if I were one of their own folks. I have cried myself to sleep over thinking how utterly alone I was."

"I can understand your feeling very well. Isolation is infinitely more painful and harder to bear than solitude. I have no doubt women may find relief from it in crying, but men can't; they are more likely to take refuge in reading, religion or rum. I take most kindly to the first, tolerate the second and detest the third. Books have been family and friends to me all my life. Are you fond of books?"

"Oh, yes, sir! But I have not had much time to read."

"What have you read?" "Well—Pope's 'Book of Martyrs' and 'Charles Temple' and 'The Scottish Chiefs' and 'The Method of Grace' and the 'Seven Champions of Christendom' and—"

Uncle David made a grimace and interrupted her dryly:

Juvenile Discouragement. "Elsie—Mamma, there's a funny old man in this Pickwick book, that's always telling his son to beware of the widows. Why is that?"

"Mamma—Well, a widow is supposed to be skillful in catching husbands. Elsie—Gracious! I don't want to be a widow in Philadelphia."

BIG PANIC IN STOCKS.

WALL STREET EXPERIENCES A TERRIBLE CRASH.

Northern Pacific Touches 1,000—Fatal Slump of Other Shares—Several Failures Are Announced—One Broker Falls Dead in the Exchange.

TOOKS took a terrible tumble Thursday. The New York exchange was a veritable bedlam, and the brokers and speculators were rank, wild-eyed madmen. The corner in Northern Pacific had assumed such colossal proportions that inevitable ruin stared hundreds of men in the face. A panic worse than that of the memorable "Black Friday" threatened to wipe out not only the "lamb," but hundreds of old and wealthy traders. Wall street was in the throes of the most violent convulsions that have ever been encountered in the wildest speculation. Up to 1 o'clock in the afternoon four failures were announced, and at least half a dozen other brokerage firms were trembling on the verge of ruin.

A. A. Houseman, one of the leading traders in the Stock Exchange, and said to have been squeezed by the Northern Pacific common corner, dropped dead on the floor of the exchange.

In the craze to liquidate, due to the "corner," Northern Pacific was run up from the close of 100 Wednesday to $1,000, per share. The effect of this was stunning. The floor of the Stock Exchange presented a scene that defies description. Up and up went the stock at bounds of 20 points. Soon the mad fever drove the price up to 1,000 bid. Nothing like this has ever happened in the history of speculation.

The fond hopes of the traders that the differences between the brokers who were struggling for control of the stock had been composed had not been realized. The wish was father to the thought. It was this contest between the giants which had unsettled the entire market and turned the course of the trading from extreme bullishness into panic.

Crowds Watch the Bedlam.

When the gavel fell for the opening of the market the largest gallery of the week was watching the scene, drawn to the exchange by the hint that there would be a general crash and many a "regular." The first stroke of the gavel was hardly audible. The second and third were drowned in a storm of vocal uproar that echoed in the vast building like the hurrah of a regiment. It was a very rude awakening when the first sale of Northern Pacific was made at 170, which was a gain of 20 points.

The worst, however, was yet to come. There was a let-down to 170 from the first jump, at which some sorely pressed bear succeeded in getting 100 shares. On five additional transactions the price ran to 205 "cash," dropped back to 160 "regular." Then the price went on skyward.

No sooner had the giants of wealth been once more the assault upon Northern Pacific than there was a crash in stocks which is unequaled in the history of the exchange. All the railroad stocks tumbled with one accord save Northern Pacific, which changed hands in lots of thousands at $300, $500 and $700. A few years ago this stock went begging at $2.50. It was like a battle scene with the cries of the wounded and slain now and then drowned by the shrill cry of victory of those who had prepared themselves for just what took place.

Meanwhile there were rumblings in other quarters. The rest of the market opened down from 1 to 14 points for all stocks, railways, industrials and traction. Then there was a slight recovery. But when the corner in Northern Pacific reached its zenith there was a convulsive movement and then came a great slump in all stocks. Northern Pacific dropped 15 points. United States Steel dropped 46 to 21, catching the longs for hundreds of thousands. Railway stocks dropped suddenly and the panic was increased until the Stock Exchange became a pandemonium. Union Pacific fell with a thud from 100 to 85, a loss of 21 points. A slight rally to 88 followed. Missouri Pacific was also panicky and dropped to 93. Atchison promptly followed with a decline of 5 points, falling to 60. Everything was panicky, barring Northern Pacific. Just before noon four failures were announced on "Change, and other crashes were momentarily expected.

The magnitude of the panic and the fierce energy with which prices were pounded down could best be realized from the tape quotations.

End Hint Come. In spite of history and experience, of warning and prophecy, thousands of men have oversteered their day in Wall street and have been ruined. For weeks past disaster has been foretold for all who continued to seek the bubble fortune in the whirl of Wall street speculation, but like those who tarried in Sodom and Gomorrah, they preferred to wait until the signs of fire actually came. Then it was too late.

Like all panics, the cause of this particular one was accidental. It seems to have been suddenly discovered that two parties of great financial strength were striving for the possession and control of the Northern Pacific Railway. Each party had in their strong boxes a large amount of shares, but neither a controlling interest. To secure this they both went into the open market to buy it, with the result that has been seen. The price of the shares went to $1,000 and fluctuated wildly. Every bid carried with it panic and ruin for the unhappy speculators who were outside the scope of the contending factions.

Whether this is the clearing-up storm or not it is difficult to say. The madness of speculation may not yet have run its course, and there may be those who will venture again, when the quiet has been restored. But—

"Now Don't Get the Blues."

When a cheerful, brave and light-hearted woman is suddenly plunged into that perfection of misery, the blues, it is a sad picture.

It is usually this way:

She has been feeling out of sorts for some time, experiencing severe headache and backache; sleeps very poorly and is exceedingly nervous.

Sometimes she is nearly overcome by faintness, dizziness, and palpitation of the heart; then that bearing-down feeling is dreadfully wearing.

Her husband says, "Now, don't get the blues! You will be all right after you have taken the doctor's medicine."

But she does not get all right. She grows worse day by day, until all at once she realizes that a distressing female complaint is established.

Her doctor has made a mistake.

She loses faith; hope vanishes; then comes the morbid, melancholy, everlasting blues. She should have been told just what the trouble was, but probably she withheld some information from the doctor, who, therefore, is unable to accurately locate her particular illness.

Mrs. Pinkham has relieved thousands of women from just this kind of trouble, and now retains their grateful letters in her library as proof of the great assistance she has rendered them. This same assistance awaits every sick woman in the land.

Mrs. Winifred Allender's Letter.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I feel it my duty to write and tell you of the benefit I have received from your wonderful remedies. Before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I was a misery to myself and every one around me. I suffered terrible pain in my back, head, and right side, was very nervous, would cry for hours. Menstrues would appear sometimes in two weeks, then again not for three or four months. I was so tired and weak, could not sleep nights, sharp pains would start through my heart that would almost cause me to fall. My mother coaxed me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I had no faith in it, but to please her I did so. The first bottle helped me so much that I continued its use. I am now well and weigh more than I ever did in my life."—MRS. WINIFRED ALLENDER, Farmington, Ill.

On Tuesday morning, May 14, 1901, a quiet home wedding occurred at the residence of Mrs. Cribb, in this city, the occasion being the marriage of her daughter, Lottie M. to A. B. Johnson, of Stillman Valley, formerly employed in this office. The marriage ceremony was performed at ten o'clock in the presence of the bride's immediate family and a few personal friends, Rev. E. J. Aikin, of the M. E. Church, officiating. After a wedding breakfast and the hearty good wishes of friends, the happy couple took the eleven o'clock train for Stillman Valley, where they will be at home to their friends after July first. The bride is a native of this township and has always been a prime favorite with our people. The groom was employed in this office about eighteen months and made many friends who join with THE NEWS force in wishing himself and bride, prosperity and happiness.

The absorbing theme of discussion around town during the past few days was the suit of David Welch vs H. B. Hoffman, which was called upon Justice court, before Squire Wilson, Saturday. J. J. Burke, appeared for the plaintiff and attorney J. K. Orris, of Waukegan, for the defendant. On request of defendant a jury was called and the following panel was sworn to try the cause: J. J. Morley, I. R. Webb, Wm. Story, Wm. Turner, C. E. Kelly and E. C. Sabir. After considerable evidence had been heard on both sides the case went to the jury about four o'clock, and after staying out about four hours and failing to agree upon a verdict, were finally discharged by the court. By agreement of the attorneys, further hearing of the case was continued until Tuesday, meanwhile a compromise was effected by defendant paying all costs of suit, including attorney fees. The suit was brought by Mr. Welch to recover a balance of $21.34 alleged to be due of defendant on the purchase of a crib of corn at a stated price for the whole, defendant alleging that the corn was purchased by him under a guarantee that the crib contained a certain number of bushels. From the mass of contradictory evidence the jury were unable to come to an agreement, with the above result.

War on Flashy Posters.

Anti-vice crusaders in Jersey City have begun war on flashy theatrical posters and will make a test case against a local manager. The case will come before Judge Hoos, who has adopted the unusual method of summoning a special jury, consisting of two clergymen, one doctor, a school principal, an artist, a merchant, a photographer and a bank cashier.

The least in quantity and most in quality describes DeWitt's Little Early Risers, the famous pills for constipation and liver complaints. Wm. T. Hill.

Women in British Mail Service.

The British postal service finds employment for 34,000 women out of 167,000 officers, and over 19,000 of these women are engaged, chiefly in the provinces, as assistants to postmasters. There are not many ranks closed to women. No fewer than 145 head postmistresses are to be found in the provinces, and more than one-third of the sub-postmaster's offices are entrusted to women.

You are much more liable to disease when your liver and bowels do not act properly. DeWitt's Little Early Risers remove the cause of disease. W. T. Hill.

Water as a Beautifier.

There is no real standard of beauty unless we except the lines for which an artist looks. We are not all artists, and we judge of beauty by our own ideas. Each nation has its standard; the ideals of one would not be those of another. Nevertheless there is one standard which we all recognize—that of good health. It shines in the eye, glows in the cheek, reddens the lip, and quickens the step. It also makes one at peace with the world, for, indeed, as a rule, the temperament is simply a matter of the liver. A torpid liver will in time spoil the temper of an angel. How many women drink enough water? Very few, indeed, and no wonder they have dried-up, wrinkled faces and figures! And yet every woman can have a water-cure at home. The first thing after rising in the morning the teeth should be brushed, and one or two glassfuls of water drunk. If the liver needs stimulating, the water should be hot and a little salt added. Drink frequently between meals, but never while eating. Fully a pint of water should be taken before breakfast and on retiring at night.—Women's Home Companion.

Host Furnished the Matches.

An anecdote of an old resident of Brooklyn Heights, more noted for his books than his generosity, is given by the Eagle. He had entertained some men at dinner one night, and after the coffee had been drunk he invited his guests in the library, and, putting a box of matches on a table, remarked: "Gentlemen, there are some matches, if any of you have any cigars which you would like to smoke."

Soil for Potting.

The best soil to use either for potting or top dressing is two parts good turfy loam (that from an old pasture is best), one part leaf mold, half a part dried horse droppings, rubbed quite fine and half a part coarse sand. The whole should be well mixed.

Whether this is the clearing-up storm or not it is difficult to say. The madness of speculation may not yet have run its course, and there may be those who will venture again, when the present quiet has been restored. But the tide will come, if it be now. The people who must set in, and who have never in their lives been buyers of stocks at prices far above par, will begin to inquire for a dividend. In the absence of dividends these stocks must go on the market and then commence the inevitable descent.
